

I cannot find the previous questions I had for this survey but I do have feedback received to show the iterative process with changing structure and imagery to the survey for better engagement:

Checkpoint 2 18-09-2024

Kock, Yoshua Y.G. 4 months ago

This is also for checkpoint 1 as I did not even notice that the first checkpoint was up. (I thought it was forgotten which is also why I asked for another one the next day). The survey's target was changed to the group of companies, event organizers and private individuals, as targeting only the group of people who enjoy theatre is more difficult to approach. The survey's structure was changed entirely to have less open questions and have more questions of multiple choice or making use of the likert scale so the users of the survey are more engaged into answering. The questions themselves have been changed too to fit with the current target audience, though more questions that revolve around the workplace should be added and don't categorize BLIK as just a theatre group and more like team-building service for the work environment. For the competitor analysis document, I will have to add links and photos as proof for everything I am analyzing of the five theatre groups I am looking into for this research method.

The whole point of this survey was to answer the following questions:

What can we learn from Blik's target audience?

Who really is Blik's target audience?

What do they feel of certain themes?

The questions that are all asked here.

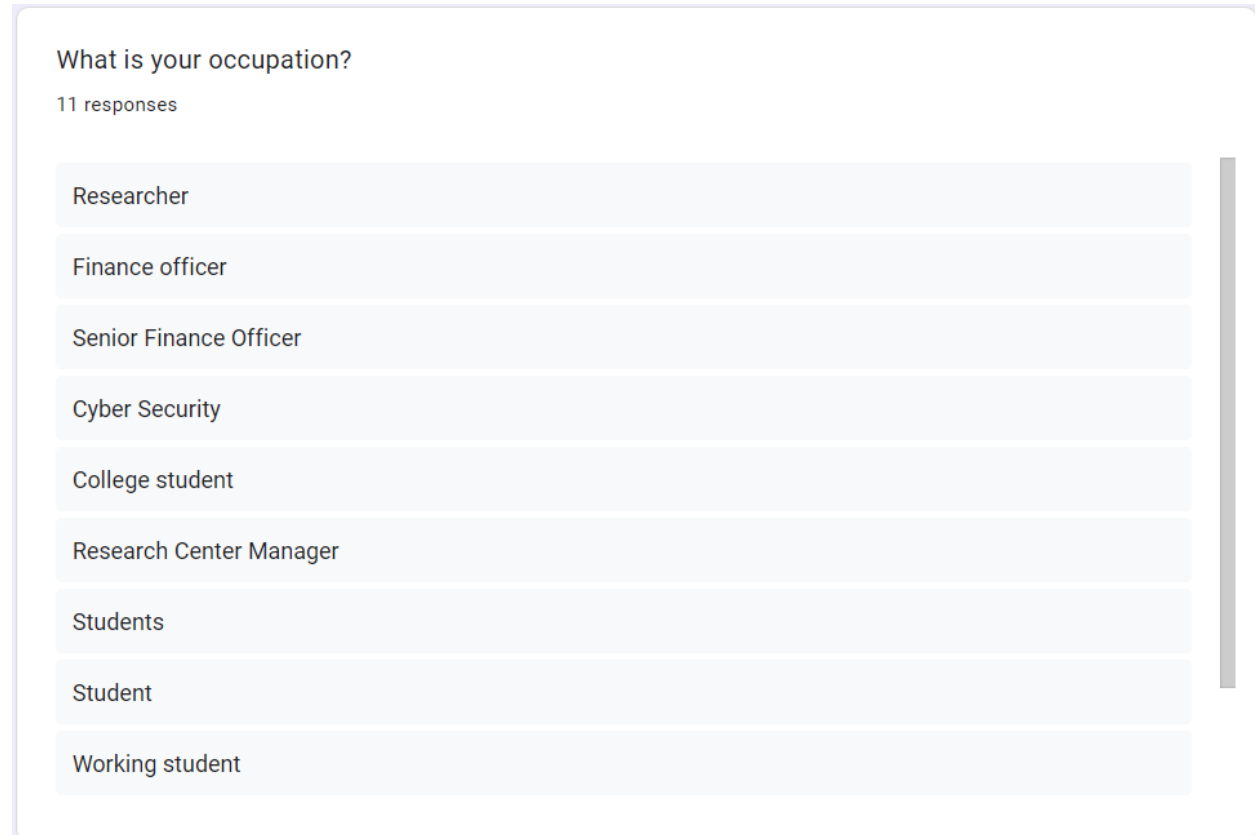

Survey Analysis

Age

From the 11 responses, the target group fits the age group is split between the majority being either under 25 years or those who are in the range of 25 years to 35. For the sake of going with people who work in companies, going with the range of 25 to 35 year olds will fit better as the target group's age group, and the persona that will be based on these survey results.

Occupation

Based on the survey, the target group varies from those working as Finance officer's, cyber security and those who are students. For the sake of the persona that will be based on these results, and fit the target group we are going with, finance officer fits best.

Their knowledge on “Playback Theatre”

Majority of the respondents have no idea of what Playback Theatre was before taking the survey and reading the brief description explaining what it was.

How likely would they book for a performance

The question was asked to the respondents on If they would book a Playback Theatre performance based on the description at the top of the survey which gives the brief information in detail on what Playback Theatre and what It could benefit from booking this kind of performance.

11 responses

To get a good idea on the direction to take with the content strategy for the client's social media presence, the question was asked to the respondents on their preferred social media platform they use in their spare time for entertainment purposes or for looking at their interests. It was clear for it be in their spare time because the target group are company worker who are busy and their most used platform during work hours would most likely be LinkedIn. And the results from this is that the social media content strategy should be based around Instagram and Facebook.

Preferred time to use social media

On what specific time of day do you like using the chosen platform above for the same purpose?

 Copy

11 responses

Majority of the respondents chose that they spend most of their time on social media, for entertainment purposes or for any other interests, during the evening. This shows the time our client should post on social media to get the most engagement.

Preferred type of content

Let's say you are following a theatre group on social media. How likely are you to engage with these types of content about the group?

 Copy

From the responses on the type of content the respondents prefer to a group similar to our client, it is a mixed rating on the options given. For the content strategy and based on the results, we will go with 3 options that are most preferred by the target audience. Those 3 types of content being: highlight reels, behind the scenes content and promotions for the client's upcoming events.

Any other type of content

Are there any other type of content on social media you would engage with that wasn't mentioned? (If yes, please answer below)

11 responses

This question was given to see a fourth type of content for the social media content strategy, or an option to take place of one of the three, but majority have no preferred option other to what they answered and rated in the previous question.

Weekly social media usage

How often do you engage with these types of content weekly?

 Copy

11 responses

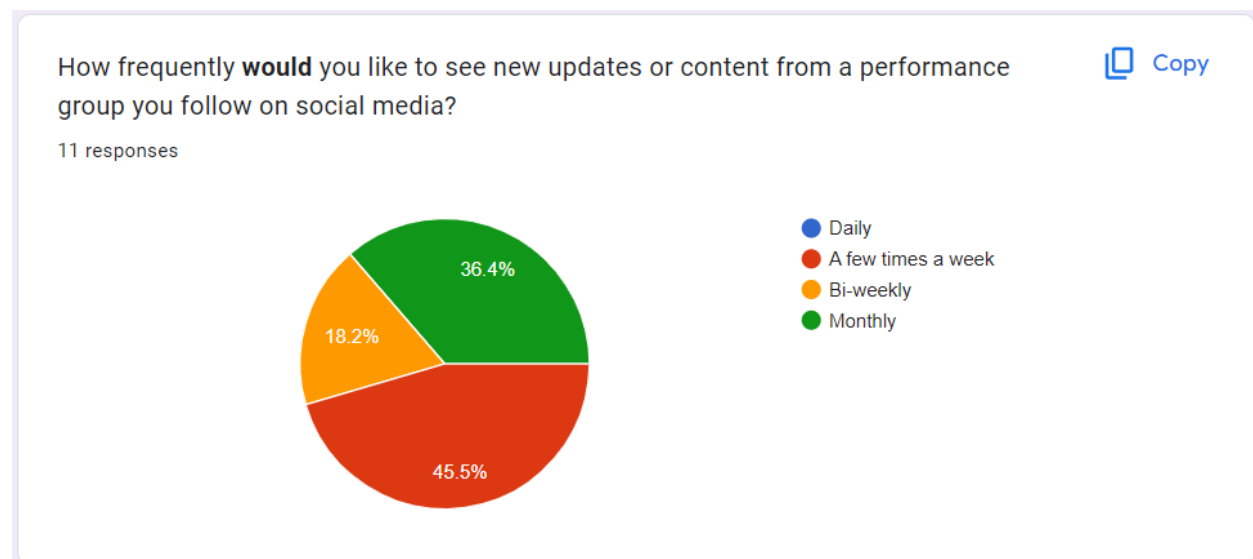

The question was asked on how much they engage in these types of content on a weekly basis. Majority are neutral on how often they do engage with them, leaning a little bit on the side that they rarely do.

Importance of a social media presence

The question was asked here to the respondents on how important a social media presence of a group like our client. The majority are neutral to how important it was, leaning a little more on that they don't care if the group has an active presence.

How much they want to see from a group

The question was asked with the purpose of the previous questions, to get an idea on what content and when these types of content should be posted to get the most engagement for the client. Majority chose for wanting to see posts a few times a week. For this we will add to the strategy that the client could post 2 times a week on Instagram and Facebook.

Color association

What is the color scheme do you associate with performances that deal with deep emotions?

 Copy

11 responses

The question was asked here to get an idea of the color tone the target audience feels from deep emotions. The question was asked to have an idea on the color palette we will go with that also fits the brand of our client. A better question would have been to ask them which these colors fit the core values of our client's brand instead of just deep emotions. (Reflection & Growth, Playfulness, etc.) For deep emotions, a dark moody tone fits well from what the respondents say.

The style of font

What style of typography do you think best suits deep emotions?

 Copy

11 responses

Just like for the color palette, asking of what kind of font fits the client's core values fit more than just associating them with deep emotions. This was to get an idea on if we should stick to serif fonts, sans-serif fonts and other kinds for the brand, worded as the option seen above assuming the respondents don't know what the hell a serif font even means.

Preferred website content

When visiting a website of a performance group, what are you looking forward to seeing first?

 Copy

11 responses

This was aimed more on what to add for the website prototype. From the results we will go with the three most chosen options. Those options being, the provided information for shows and events, booking rates and information and information of the group's mission and values. This also works along to give the user a good first impression and understanding of the website.

Type of imagery

Which one of these types of imagery would you like to see more of a performance group's website?

 Copy

11 responses

This is aimed to the media content for the website. Majority of the respondents chose for images of emotional moments from the performers. We will also go for the two other options which are: Light-hearted group photos of the actors and performers engaging with the audience. These three options also fall well with Playback Theatre performances.

Website presentation

This last question was to get an idea on how important a visually appealing website is for the target group. Compared to the social media presentation, majority find a visually appealing website to be somewhat important. Which gives a good idea to focus more on having priority on visual appeal for the website than the social media posts.
